DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

In previous issues of the REGISTER was given a list of the College matriculates who took part in the Civil War, on either the Northern or the Southern side, so far as information was obtainable. One omission has been called to my attention, that of the name of Joseph Beale, Jr., a graduate of the Class of '32 College and of the Class of '36 Medical, who was Surgeon General of the U. S. Navy. His name will appear with those of his medical class. No doubt there are other omissions and errors, and I repeat the request, originally made in the first issue, that these should be pointed out to me.

I now present the list of matriculates of the Medical School who served in the War. It has been compiled under serious difficulties and is probably more defective than the College list. I have been unsuccessful in enlisting the interest of the Medical Alumni Society in any way, and have thus lost a valuable source of assistance.

A letter of application to the Secretary of War at Washington for information from the records of the Department was returned to me with the endorsement of the Adjutant General that "a strict rule prohibits the furnishing of information from the official records for such purposes." On the other hand, a similar letter to the Secretary of the Navy brought a prompt and courteous reply from the acting Secretary, Hon. Beekman Winthrop, offering every assistance within his power, for which I am glad to make here my grateful acknowledgments.

The first instalment of the list, such as I have been able to make it up to this time, is now presented and further instalments will appear in subsequent issues of the REGISTER until it is completed. I would earnestly ask all those under whose eyes it may come to scrutinize it closely for errors and omissions, and to write me at once of any which they may discover. It is a large list of names and involves much labor to obtain the data for notes of service. It is inevitable that there will be a great many names omitted from this initial publication which ought to be here and I hope that these may be supplied to me by those who note their absence.

EWING JORDAN, M.D.,
1510 Walnut Street,
Philadelphia.

(NOTE.—All degrees noted are those of the University of Pennsylvania, unless coupled with the name of some other institution.)

Surgeon-in-charge Cooper Shop Volunteer Refreshment Saloon, Philadelphia, during the entire war. Two volunteer refreshment saloons, one called the Cooper-Shop and the other the Union, were established by committees of citizens of Philadelphia at the foot of Washington Avenue, on the Delaware River, in April, 1861, and continued until the close of the war. Here came the great stream of volunteers from New England, crossing New Jersey, and the Delaware River at Camden. At these refreshment saloons almost 1,200,000 Union soldiers received a bountiful meal before entering the cars for Washington. In addition, 20,000 soldiers had their wounds dressed, and 15,000 refugees and freedmen were also cared for. In these labors the women of Philadelphia bore a large share. At all hours of the night, when a little signal gun was fired these self-sacrificing women would repair to their post of duty.

WHITEHEAD, WILLIAM RIDDICK:

- b. Suffolk, Va., Dec. 15, 1831.
- d. Denver, Colo., Oct. 13, 1902.

He served as a surg. in the Russian army at Sevastopol, and was highly commended for his skill by the famous Russian surgeon Pirogoff. Surg., 44th Va. Regt., C. S. Army, 1861-63. He was successively regimental surg., senior surg. of brigade, and acting surg. of division, and during the last year of the war president of an examining board in South Carolina for the examination of conscripts and disabled soldiers. At the battle of Chancellorsville he had the wounded Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson placed in an ambulance, and sent to the rear. After the battle of Gettysburg, he had charge of the wounded of Jackson's old Corps, who could not be removed, and on the retreat of the Confederate army the Federals took possession of their camp of wounded, but allowed him to remain in charge and liberally furnished supplies for the wounded. About a month after the battle Dr. Whitehead with other Confederate surgeons was sent to Baltimore, and instead of being exchanged, as expected, was retained as a prisoner of war, and shut up in an inclosure adjoining Fort McHenry. In the meantime a pretty cousin whose home was in Brooklyn, N. Y., to whom he was engaged and afterward married, had, on account of her ill health, gained permission from U. S. Secretary of War Stanton to cross the lines into Virginia. On learning this, Dr. Whitehead plotted to free himself from the uninteresting life of a prison barrack. One dark night he made his escape in citizen's dress and in a few days reached Canada. He took passage from Halifax to St. George's, Bermuda, where the Confederate quartermaster placed him on a swift blockade-runner to Wilmington, N. C., which he reached in safety after an exciting trip.

- d. Yonkers, N. Y., Aug. 12, 1889.

At the outbreak of the war he was requested to accompany the first regiments of militia ordered to proceed to Washington, on two hours' notice. He organized the medical corps of the regiments under his charge, was subsequently appointed medical director pro tem. in New York, and inspected all the recruits for thirty-eight regiments of New York volunteers, over 70,000 men passing under his supervision. He subsequently, under orders, visited and inspected all the New York regiments around Washington, Fortress Monroe, etc., and continued this arduous work till he was relieved on account of sickness contracted in the performance of his duty; when, on returning to New York, he resumed the office of inspector, beside being associated with the U. S. mustering and disbursing office of that city. He established a post hospital for the sick soldiers passing through the city, but this proving inadequate, he founded, with several patriotic women of New York, the U. S. Army Gen. Hospital, corner of 51st St. and Lexington Ave., which he was placed in charge of by the surg.-gen. In Nov., 1862, he was appointed Maj. surg., U. S. Vols., and thenceforth gave much of his time to the hospital just mentioned. He was appointed also one of the medical examining board for admission to the medical corps of the army for surgeons of volunteers, and served one year in that capacity. In the winter of 1864-65, he was ordered on duty as inspector of the Dept. of Virginia, with headquarters with the Army of the James, then under command of Maj. Gen. E. O. C. Ord. He served with him until the close of the war, and after the memorable campaign of April, 1865, was present at the conference between Gens. Ord and Longstreet, on the morning of the 9th of that month, and in the room, by special request, at the interview between Gens. Grant and Lee, in the afternoon of that day, when the articles of agreement of surrender were signed at Appomattox C. H., Va. After this he was ordered on duty in Richmond. He was bvt. Lt. Col. Vols., June, 1865, for faithful and meritorious service, and was honorably mustered out July 27, 1865.

Asst. surg., 7th Pa. Cav., Nov., 1861; promoted to Maj. surg., June, 1863. The regiment saw service in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia. On Dec. 29, 1864, Surg. Sherk with a Capt. McCormick of his regiment visited the house of some friends at Bardstown, Ky., which was a short distance beyond the Federal lines. They had hardly been seated and were enjoying their short release from duty when the house was surrounded by a band of guerillas led by either Sue Mundy or H. C. Magruder. Surg. Sherk and his friend saw at once that escape was impossible, and both went to the door and offered their surrender to the man in charge of the band. The offer was not considered; both men were deliberately shot to death.

FRANCIS A. THIBAUT, B.S., M.E., '95, died at his home, Aylston Lodge, Rosemont, Delaware Co., Pa., Monday, January 5, 1914, and was buried from the residence of his mother, Mrs. Isaac Hough, 325 South Sixteenth Street, Philadelphia, on Thursday, January 8th. The funeral service was a Solemn Requiem Mass, at St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church, Twentieth and Rittenhouse Streets, and interment was made in the Thibault vault in Woodlands Cemetery.

The honorary pall bearers were: Mr. Wilfred Powell, British Consul General; Colonel Caldwell K. Biddle ('84 Coll.), commander of the Third Regiment Infantry, N.G.P.; Hon. D. Webster Dougherty ('78 Law); First Lieutenant William E. Bates, First Troop Philadelphia City Cavalry; Dr. Henry Morris; Dr. Thompson S. Westcott ('82 Coll., '86 Med.); Mr. Henrik V. von Zornicow Loss and Mr. Samuel C. Bunting, Jr.

Francis Adrian Thibault was born December 2, 1864, at the residence of his father, Francis Thibault, 1607 Walnut Street, Philadelphia. He entered the Towne Scientific School, University of Pennsylvania, in 1881, in the Class of '85, but, an extra year having been added to the scientific course during his term, he was graduated in June, 1886, with the degrees of Bachelor of Science and Mechanical Engineer. All his class affiliations, however, were with the Class of '85. In business he was associated with the Royal Insurance Company, Ltd., 306 Walnut Street.

Francis A. Thibault joined the First Troop Philadelphia City Cavalry at the time of the Homestead riots in 1892, and served with that organization through the Spanish War in 1898, taking part in the Porto Rico campaign. Some time after the war he attained the rank of sergeant, and at the time of his death was on the non-active roll of the Troop.

Mr. Thibault was a member of the University Club, the Merion Cricket Club and the Franklin Institute.

Mr. Thibault's two brothers were: Frederic Thibault, B.A., '86, who also served with the City Troop in the Spanish War, and died April 4, 1909; and Carrow Thibault, B.A., '88, one of the University's noted sprinters in his day, winner of many prizes, collegiate, intercollegiate and others; he died July 23, 1893.

'94.—WILLIAM LEWIS JUDKINS, M.D., of Barnesville, Ohio, died on December 9, 1913, aged forty-five years, in Mt. Carmel Hospital, Columbus, Ohio.

'95.—IRVING CORNELIUS RANKIN, M.D., a member of the Ohio State Medical Association; gynecologist of the Akron City Hospital, and surgeon to the Northern Ohio Traction Company; for three years city physician; died at his home in Akron, January 1st, from nephritis, aged forty-two.

'00.—JOSEPH FRANCIS DE SILVER, M.D., died at Atlantic City, N. J., January 1, 1914, aged thirty-eight years. Dr. De Silver was the secretary of the Atlantic City Alumni Society and was a member of the University football squad while in college. He entered with the class of 1899 in architecture.

SMITH, LOUIS TURNER:

b. on his father's Tar River plantation, Granville Co., N. C., May 7, 1833.

d. Durham, Durham Co., N. C., Feb. 6, 1895.

Soon after returning home from the University of Pennsylvania, the question of secession became the paramount political issue. While believing that the State had the legal right to secede, he deemed such action unwise and inexpedient, so espoused the Union cause and became locally prominent as a "Union man." He raised a large U. S. flag on his lawn, which was not lowered until North Carolina withdrew from the Union. It was then tenderly folded away until Gen. Joseph E. Johnston surrendered, when it was again unfurled with the hope that North and South would soon be re-united. That flag is still cherished as a precious family heirloom. Although a "Union man" before secession, yet when war was declared, he was one of the first citizens of Granville County to enlist in a volunteer company which was raised by his friend and neighbor, Dr. Eugene Grissom (class 1858), and later became surg., 30th N. C. Regt., C. S. Army, attached to the Army of Northern Va. He was with "Stonewall" Jackson's army in its famous campaigns, serving as field surg. in many important battles, but a few weeks before his great commander's death, after a severe illness, he was assigned to special service under Col. Peter Mallett, in the conscript department, with headquarters at Raleigh, N. C. He also held several important hospital positions in Richmond, Va., and Wilmington, N. C. For one of his age and experience he received unusual recognition, and was several times promoted. On one occasion, while ministering to the sick and wounded under peculiarly difficult circumstances, "Stonewall" Jackson, who happened to be passing, stopped and spoke words of personal commendation, an honor which Dr. Smith never referred to except in his own family circle. He served from the beginning of the war until its close, and returned home with his health undermined from hardship endured in the field.

TAYLOR, HENRY GENÈT:

A.M., Rutgers, 1889

- b. Charmanto, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., July 6, 1837.

The day after the first battle of Bull Run, Va., July 22, 1861, in response to the request of his former preceptor, Prof. Henry H. Smith, then Surgeon General of Pennsylvania, he went to Washington, D. C., and for a time assisted in taking care of the wounded brought there from the battlefield. In Sept., 1861, he was commissioned asst. surg., 8th N. J. Inf., and was attached to the Army of the Potomac for three years. During the Peninsula campaign in 1862, he was the only medical staff officer of his regiment on field duty. After the second Bull Run battle, Aug. 29, 1862, he remained within the Confederate lines for ten days, and showed most efficient service by bringing the wounded under his charge safely into Washington. Soon after the battle of Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862, he was detailed to the artillery brigade of the Third Army Corps, as Brigade surg. of Artillery, on the staffs respectively of Major Generals Hooker, French, and Sickles. He continued to hold this position until March 15, 1864, when he resigned and was honorably discharged because of his father's serious illness. He was present at and rendered professional services in twenty-five battles and minor engagements. In June, 1864, he was appointed asst. surg. of the Board of Enrollment of the First Congressional District of New Jersey, to assist in examining recruits and drafted men for the army, and held this office until the close of the war.

Inf., as chief musician, autumn of 1864; honorably discharged April 3, 1866. He was present at the battles of Shiloh, Corinth, Perryville, Murfreesboro, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, Resaca, and Atlanta. He was severely wounded in the head and side at the battle of Stone's River, near Murfreesboro, Dec. 31, 1862, and left on the field for dead, where he lay for hours until befriended by a Confederate soldier, who was hunting for a wounded comrade, and taken to a large dry goods store in Murfreesboro, which had been converted into a hospital, and placed on the bare floor with 300 other severely wounded men. Here the wounded remained until those who were strong enough were sent by train to a Southern prison. While assembled in a room in the town jail, too small for any one to sit down, awaiting their transfer South, Doctor Clark and a comrade, in their desperation to get out of the unwholesome air, found on moving a large stone box from against one of the walls of the room, a hole in the wall, through which they crept and in wandering about came to an empty cell, where they closed the door and slept on the stone floor until morning, when they discovered that the Confederates had evacuated the town and taken with them the other prisoners. The two escaped prisoners learned later that a roll call of the prisoners made before their departure revealed the absence of the two men and an ineffectual search was made for them. Clark and his comrade eventually reached the Union lines in safety.

UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA MEN WHO SERVED IN THE CIVIL WAR, 1861-1865

II.

DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE

The present instalment of war records of our medical graduates which were received too late for insertion in their proper classes, probably is the last. The graduates of our Law School who served in the Civil War will follow in subsequent issues of THE REGISTER.

After pursuing every avenue of research open to him, the Editor fears that there are many graduates of the Medical School of the University who served in the Civil War and whose names are not included in the list, especially from the South. Both the Army and the Navy Departments at Washington have been of most valuable assistance and have furnished much information from the Government files; but for the graduates who served in the Southern armies the available sources are meagre. It is earnestly desired that every one who knows of a name that should be included, or who can correct in any way the lists already published, will communicate with the Editor,

EWING JORDAN, M.D.,
1225 Spruce St.,
Philadelphia, Pa.

(NOTE.—All degrees noted are those of the University of Pennsylvania, unless coupled with the name of some other institution.)
